. 100,000 Booksellers Download Ebook Farmakope Indonesia Edisi 31 as PDF here. A: You can use a regular expression that matches strings of your choice (containing the word "Download"): "Download Ebook Farmakope Indonesia Edisi 31 . Download Ebook Farmakope Indonesia Edisi 31" -match "Download" If you want to grab the filename as well, you'll need some form of extended regular expression as all extensions come in the form of a backslash-escaped "extension" delimited by a period. If you want to be sure that you get the period then you need to escape the period as it is a special character in regexes. You can use the RegexOptions.Multiline flag to tell regex that you want it to work across multiple lines. To do that, you need to pass it as a dictionary like this: "Download Ebook Farmakope Indonesia Edisi 31.txt" -match "\\.( [a-zA-Z0-9_]{3,} )\\.+?\\.txt" I'm no expert on what's going on in your code but this matches a file that ends in ".txt" and starts with the character ". Download Ebook Farmakope Indonesia Edisi 31" is what you're looking for here and it will print out the text between the square brackets. The substitution for that is the part in parenthesis, which is whatever you put in a variable to hold it. So I would use this: $Line = "$($matches[1]) Download Ebook Farmakope Indonesia Edisi 31.txt" And then you have $Line in your pipeline. To do this for as many files as you have: Get-

ChildItem.*.txt | %{$line = $matches[1] + ".txt"; $line} | %{$_} | Out-File -FilePath "C:\ErrorTest.txt" To grab the substring between the square brackets without using a variable and to give you a file name and such, you can use the -match operator: Get-ChildItem.*.txt | %{$_} | Out-File -FilePath
